Unless You Want Full Control of Your Organization's Communication Solution

RingByName®

Enterprise managers have a host of telecom service options. With respect to the characteristics of the service itself, the options can quickly blur. RingByName is not another one of these and the difference is simple: the Superuser.

Every leading service provider manages their service details in ways that can be very restrictive and limiting. They only offer service in certain parts of the world but not others. They only offer certain calling plans and payment options but not others. They only offer certain devices and other endpoints but not others. They only offer management tools that are incomplete and inefficient. They have set the details of their service in ways that presumably work for them and might work for some of their customers but likely isn't completely ideal for your unique business or an entire enterprise.

With RingByName you -- the enterprise telecom manager -- are the Superuser.

You can do a host of valuable and powerful things that are normally reserved for the service provider. Being able to do these things yourself gives your business a competitive edge in telecom management, lowers operating and administrative costs, and flat-out makes your life as the manager easier every single day.

- Order and activate local telecom services in more than 100 countries instantly through a single interface
- Define the services available to a user type including full UCaaS, basic business phone service, fax, and/or conferencing
- Design a calling plan for a user or group of users that controls calling by region, cost, and other business objectives using the Create-A-Plan feature
- Deliver localized calling and extension dialing worldwide with the Custom Dial Plan feature
- Configure and manage SIP endpoints remotely via a cloud-based provisioning service
- Gain access to a complete set of APIs and plug-ins to 1,000+ leading business apps

Telecom services are competitive in every respect. Features are largely comparable as prices are too. Shifting the power of the Superuser from the service provider to the customer is transformational. It unlocks opportunities to eliminate waste, inefficiency, and overcharges; it compresses provisioning intervals from weeks to moments; it makes dreaded events like new office openings, moves, and migrations routine.

RingByName and the power of the Superuser can deliver massive savings in money and time to any large organization with lots of different users and locations.

RingByName and the power of the Superuser are available today.
