ALLYN IT ONGOING SUPPORT

What we do

Why ongoing support?

1

It's not always practical or cost-effective to retain an internal Salesforce admin. According to Salesforce, the average annual salary for an admin is $95,000. And many small to medium sized businesses don't need a full time admin, meaning the choice is often between overpaying for convenience or assigning the job to someone as a secondary role, hoping they figure it out.

2

Without a strong admin, you risk allowing the value of your technology investment to plateau or worse, decline over time. Your business is constantly changing - you grow, your products or services change, your business processes are modified - and each time there's a change your technology becomes slightly more obsolete. A capable admin will keep the technology in line with changes to your business.

3

According to Salesforce, there's a 2:1 job to qualified candidate ratio for Salesforce admins. That means finding a suitable direct hire can be a challenge. It also makes training up a candidate risky given the competitive nature of the job market. Ongoing support simplifies things so you can focus on running your business.
